Graduate Diploma in Media Production (GradDipMedProd)

This is a production-based qualification from Screen Production or related disciplines, consisting of one-year total full-time study. The focus of this course is in empowering students to transition to the Screen industry as content producers. This is done through intensive master-classes with industry professionals and professional on-set experience with industry mentors. Students will gain experience and knowledge in all key aspects of film-making, but during production can choose to focus on Writing, Producing, Directing, Cinematography, Sound, Editing, or Production Design. At the end of semester, students will apply for a cash funding initiative to support their final production. This course requires students to undertake work-based training through a compulsory work-based placement as part of their studies.

Duration: 1 year full-time

Main Research Areas:

Media, Communication, Culture, Arts, Sociology.

Admission Requirements (Onshore):

Recognised Bachelor's degree in media production, or equivalent training, or satisfactory preparation for the course through previous study or professional experience. Extensive production credits may also be considered as an appropriate equivalent entry qualification.

Humanities

Employment Prospects:

Digital content creation, television, film, video, radio and multimedia production organisations, media and cultural industries, public relations, education, arts management, television journalism, corporate communications, alternative media, and as freelance filmmakers.
