Veterinary Medicine

Course Codes: N1022

Availability:

- Murdoch campus (internal)

Waardong is a special entry and enabling program in the School of Veterinary and Life Sciences for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people who want to become veterinarians. In order to maximise student success, Waardong provides academic, social and cultural support for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander students enrolled in Veterinary Science or, as approved by the relevant Academic Chair, other participating Science courses.

Waardong teaches Orientation Chemistry for students without a background in chemistry, and supplementary enabling units for students throughout their veterinary or other science studies.

Students interested in applying for entry should contact the Special Education Officer in the School of Veterinary and Life Sciences. The deadline for submission of applications is 30 September each year; Testing and Selection week is in early December.

Admission Requirements (Onshore):

This special entry program for Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander people is based on student results during the one-week residential Testing and Selection process. Evaluation of student readiness for study involves practical and written exercises throughout the week. Alternate entry may be permitted through K-Track, with approval from the relevant Academic Chair.

Program Structure

Students entering Waardong are placed in either one of Non-Chemistry Transition or Transition with Chemistry.

Non-Chemistry Transition

Students who do not have a background in chemistry are placed in Non-Chemistry Transition, which provides an intensive Orientation Chemistry and supplementary tutoring in all other units. Students take the first year over two academic years.

Transition with Chemistry

Students who have entered their Science major with Year 12 Chemistry are placed in Transition with Chemistry, which provides for supplementary tutoring in all units. These students enrol in the first year full-time.
